LAMAS Lecture Programme 2008

All meetings take place at the Museum of London on Thursday evenings at 6.30pm in the Terrace Room – refreshments from 6pm. Meetings are open to all; members may bring guests, and non-members are welcome.

8 May 2008

The Historic and Architecture of Clerkenwell: A Summary of the Survey of London's Findings, Colin Thom, Senior Historian, Survey of London, English Heritage

Important Announcement: LAMAS Research Fund

The Research Fund is a modest sum granted annually to support research into the archaeology and history of London and Middlesex. We would now like to invite applications for the 2008/2009 fund.

How much will the fund be and who can apply?

The fund level for the year 2008/2009 has been set by Council at £5000. Applications are invited for all or part of this sum. The fund is open to all full individual members of the Society.

What can the fund be used for?

The fund can be used to support specific projects of almost any type, which relate to the core objectives of the Society as set out in our Constitution. Archaeological applications must also fit within the Research Agenda for London (REF), and show that the research is not that which should have been funded through other means, particularly through development control conditions (such as are applied through PPG16), or as part of a previously agreed Scheduled Ancient Monument Consent, for example. For historical research projects, favour will be given to those projects focused on landscapes, districts, monuments, or buildings over biographical or other approaches. Specific educational fieldwork projects may also be supported (such as a Young Archaeologist's Club, or National Archaeology Days).

How does one apply?

Applicants will need to write a Project Design to set out the following:

- Succinct and clear summary of the work – what it is going to achieve and why it is important? (project objectives)
- Statement of how it meets the Constitutional criteria (and for archaeology, the Research Agenda) (project context)
- Who is going to do the work and when (project team and timetable)
- What tasks the work entails (a method statement)
- What we can expect the report to contain in terms of text, illustrations and figures, including an estimate of word count (synopsis)
- How much is being asked for and how it is being allocated (project costings)

Applications must be received by Council by no later than 30 September each year. Decisions will be made during October, and successful applicants notified by letter on or around 1 November (Council will notify all applicants of their success or failure, and give general reasons. Council's decision is final). The work must be undertaken and completed within 10 months and submitted to be received by Council by 31 August of the following year. The project submissions will be appraised by Council in the September of each year, and, assuming the work is of the expected form and quality, cheques issued to cover the grant on agreement of sign-off.

Full details can be found on our website: www.lamas.org.uk or from Jackie Keily (jkeily@museumoflondon.org.uk; tel. 020 7814 5734).

CBA London – Progress Report

In January a first meeting took place of prospective trustees of the Council for British Archaeology's new London Regional Group. Harvey Sheldon attended as representative of LAMAS. The Chairman of the new group is Andrew Dismore MP (MP for Hendon), the Vice-Chairman Don Cooper (Hendon and District Archaeological Society), the Secretary James Doerer (Institute of Archaeology, UCL), and the Treasurer Sheila Broomfield (currently Chairman of SCOLA).

The letter from LAMAS and the other county societies asking for assurances that CBA London would not erode established publications or organise conferences that would compete with our own was received favourably – but we have had no formal response to that letter as yet. By the time you receive this Newsletter the Group will be advertising for new members – the status of existing members of the two neighbouring CBA groups (Mid-Anglia and South-East England, whose boundary up to now has been the Thames) seems still to be unclear. There will be an optional joint subscription to CBA London and the London Archaeologist magazine.

The Executive Committee of SCOLA (Standing Conference on London Archaeology) has yet to make a decision about its own future. A decision that SCOLA will be wound up will only be made if the Committee is convinced that the new body can and will meet the aims for which SCOLA was originally established. We await more information on promised CBA London new initiatives. Meanwhile LAMAS can look forward to working with the new body.

Greater London Archaeology Advisory Service Webpages

The Greater London Archaeology Advisory Service now has its own pages on the English Heritage website. These can be found at: <http://www.english-heritage.org.uk/server/show/nav.8900> or search on 'English Heritage' and on the home page, under 'Research and Conservation', click on Archaeology and Buildings, and from there click on Greater London Archaeology Advisory Service at the foot of the left-hand links column. The website will focus on archaeology in London, and the work of GLAAS and English Heritage (London Region). It will include news and events, recent discoveries, planning advice, GLAAS publications (the Annual Reviews, old Quarterly Reviews, summaries of site reports and Standard Guidance Papers), ideas for active participation in archaeology and useful links.

Livesey Museum Closure

Southwark Council voted to close the Livesey Museum for Children, only 21 days after the staff heard of its threatened closure (it closed to the public after 1 March). This must be one of the fastest closures of an established public museum ever. The process has been scandalous. The campaign to save the Livesey continues so we are still appealing for your support. This includes continuing to publicise and sign the petition and make your feelings known to Southwark Council and DCMS about the process of closure. The key task now for core supporters is to constitute ourselves and seek charitable funding, as we are proposing to run the Museum for the community, if we can save the building from being sold. We're hoping our children's delegation and support from DCMS and local MPs will help in that process of negotiation.

You can follow progress on the blog, which will have more information in time, <http://savethelivesey.blogspot.com> and on Facebook: <http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=8314768438>. Any ideas or offers of help are very welcome and should be addressed to Bridget McKenzie (Friends of the Livesey Museum for Children and Director of Flow Associates, 07890 540 178, www.flowassociates.com).

MINUTES

Minutes of the LAMAS Annual General Meeting Terrace Room, Museum of London, 20th February 2008

On platform: President: Simon Thurley (ST), Chairman: Eileen Bowlt (EB), Hon Treasurer: Martin Williams, Hon Secretary: Jackie Keily (JK) (taking minutes).

Approximately 60 members attended

1. Apologies: Rupert Morris, Kate Sutton, Laura Schaaf, Patricia Clarke, Jon Finney, Natalie Cohen, John Schofield, Roy Stephenson, June Stubbs

2. Minutes of AGM 8th February 2007: Cecil Cherns proposed that the minutes of the previous AGM were accepted; this was seconded by Joanna Clark. The minutes were confirmed and signed as a correct record. There were no matters arising.

3. Annual Report and Accounts: The 152nd Annual Report was circulated to members. EB summarised the main points. It had been a successful year and membership had stabilised. The lecture series moved to the Terrace Room at the Museum of London as a temporary measure during the building work that is taking place at the Museum of London. Cheryl Smith had organised a very varied and enjoyable series of lectures. The numbers attending the lectures had varied but were now increasing, helped by our new publicity officer, Mark Service. EB thanked both CS and MS for all their hard work.

All the committees had been very busy this year and EB thanked them for their assistance in the running of the Society. The Annual Conference of London Archaeologists in March was well attended. The Local History Committee conference had also drawn a large audience and included the presentation of the Annual Publications' Award. EB noted the important contribution made by the Historic Buildings and Conservation Committee. The Publications' Committee had been revived and was looking at the possibility of restarting Occasional Papers. In addition, the website is now under new management and has had a complete re-design. Lynn Pitts had produced Volume 56 of Transactions in the autumn and Meriel Jeater had continued to edit the Newsletter. Both were thanked for their work. Membership was 624 compared to 632 in the previous year. EB reported that all in all this had been a very successful year and congratulations were due to all those who had worked so hard on the society's behalf, both on Council and in the various Committees.

MW reported on the Society's finances. Thanks were given to Alan Buss for examining the accounts and to Patricia Clarke for her work on subscriptions. There had been a slight operating loss in the last year, which had been expected. Subscriptions were slightly down but more Gift Aid forms had been collected which was good. Less had been spent on Transactions this year and other costs had been fairly well controlled. There had been grants to assist other publications and also the Research Fund grant (which had been awarded to Peter Rowsome to aid his work on the Roman map of London). All in all the Society's funds were in good shape.

Questions from the floor:

Andrew Selkirk asked if the time and location of the meetings could be added to the website? JK agreed that this would be done immediately.

Cecil Cherns asked why the Archaeological Conference had been more expensive this year? MW replied that this was due to the Museum of London Lecture Theatre (which had been free) no longer being available and that the Museum in Docklands lecture theatre was now used, which had to be paid for.

Andrew Selkirk informed the Treasurer that the Hendon and District Archaeological Society had moved money into Charifund, which had proved a very successful move. MW will look into this further.

elected. CB thanked the Society and reminded those attending that she had been a member since 1962 and also had taught ST when he was an undergraduate. She regularly attended the Society's meetings, enjoyed its publications and encouraged her students to publish in Transactions.

ST replied that he would continue to enjoy the Society and its publications and apologised for his inability to attend the Local History Conference, which had been due to matters out of his control (a fatality on the train line from Norfolk).

7. Any other business: ST thanked Joanna Clark for the refreshments and declared the AGM closed.

ST then gave his final Presidential address, 'Is London's Past Finished? And Does Anyone Care?'

REVIEW

Review of 45th LAMAS Conference of London Archaeologists Museum in Docklands 5 April 2008

The conference commenced with Nick Bateman's lecture (MoLAS: The Olympics: the First Fruits of Fieldwork). On site of the 2012 Olympic Park is a deeply buried prehistoric landscape. Since the Mesolithic when our ancestors started to hunt and fish in the area, people have used the natural river channels of the River Lea for drainage, transport, water supply and latterly as a source of industrial power. From the Saxon period the surrounding marshes have been drained and farmed. Work to date has revealed a range of discoveries including a 19th-century skiff, medieval drainage channels and Late Bronze Age crouched burials.

Slumbering under the 18th-century park at Syon Abbey, Richmond, are the remains of the only medieval Bridgettine nunnery in England (founded in 1415 and finally closed in 1559). The nunnery was a rich foundation and possessed a church of palatial proportions. Since 2004 Harvey Sheldon (Birkbeck College: Syon Abbey: Recent Work) has directed the annual London University Training Dig here, uncovering elements of the nunnery foundations and later gardens.

Andrew Westman (MoLAS: Investigating Standing Buildings: Cops and Dossers in Edwardian London) demonstrated how much we can learn from the study of vanishing buildings. He started by considering the complex of police buildings along King's Cross Road. This began in 1841 with the erection of the Clerkenwell Police Court, a modest residential-style building, rebuilt in 1860. Then in 1903-1906, a much larger new Magistrate's Court was built next door. This building was a masterpiece of architectural evolution in terms of the criminal justice system in the way it created a carefully controlled and regulated environment. A quite different but equally regulated environment was the Lord Rowton's poor man's hotel at Newington Butts, Southwark, constructed in 1897 to provide cheap digs for 900 working men.

Sophie Jackson (MoLAS: Work in the City and Beyond in 2007) listed some the recent highlights of fieldwork, starting with Holywell Priory (established c.1150, suppressed 1539) where excavations were carried out in advance of the East London Line extension. Work revealed two in-situ column bases belonging to the 13th-century nunnery church, and part of a Roman period cemetery. At the church of St Martin-in-the-Fields, evidence revealed both 1st-century AD occupation and early Saxon burials. Further work at Walbrook House (previously reported here in 2007) revealed a sequence of late 1st-century AD buildings erected on part of the reclaimed marsh. At New Change, evidence of Bronze Age activity was found. At 29-33 King Street more fragments of what appears to be a series a Roman temples flanking the via decumana were found. At 8-13 Lime Street masses of colourful painted wall plaster depicting candelabrum, goldfinches and grapes were uncovered. The medieval period was represented by investigations of the City ditch at St Bartholomew's Hospital, the Old Bailey and Heron Tower. The medieval port was re-examined within trenches dug around the footprint of two recent developments, which revealed fragments of waterfront structures.

Tim Bradley (PCA: Excavations at Drapers' Gardens) described the most impressive London find of 2007: the hoard of twenty 4th-century Roman copper- and lead-alloy vessels recovered from a timber-lined well in the upper Walbrook area of the City of London (see British Archaeology Jan/Feb 2008). Under the 1960s tower block at Drapers' Gardens was a well-preserved, waterlogged early Roman landscape, which included five mid-1st-century infant burials, a wooden door, a trackway and a series of wooden buildings, including one with a well-preserved plank floor. A wealth of finds included a brown bear skull.

The afternoon session was a tribute to Harvey Sheldon and featured a selection of articles from the forthcoming volume - Londinium and Beyond: Essays on Roman London and its Hinterland for Harvey Sheldon. This CBA Res Rep (No156) will be published in July 2008, but it is available now at a pre-publication price of £28 (visit www.britarch.ac.uk/pubs or call Central Books: 0845 458 9910).

Barney Sloane (Picturing Roman London) looked at how our ancestors from 1672 onward illustrated a variety of discoveries showing changing concepts and styles of presentation. Hedley Swain and Tim Williams (The Population of Roman London) looked at the issue of demographic reconstruction. They concluded that the average population of Londinium (including extra-mural suburbs) was in AD 60 c.9,306 people; in AD 100-120 c.25,844; and in AD 200 c.30,632. Ralph Jackson (Imagining Healthcare in Roman London) conjured up some scary notions of surgery being largely carried out with kitchen tools by the untrained. John Shepherd (Glass in Roman London) reviewed the evidence for production of glassware and also the recycling of waste material. Richard Reece (Satellite, Parasite or Just London?) asked whether urban centres need a motive/function to be established. Do they need to collect taxes sustain themselves as ‘satellites’ or are they ‘parasites’ that survive only by means of external subsidy and civic investment and fail once this support is withdrawn?

New Wall Map of London in 1520

The best map of medieval London is to be found in the Historic Towns Atlas volume, The City of London from Prehistoric Times to c.1520 edited by Mary Lobel and published by the Oxford University Press in 1989. That volume has for a long time been out of print and virtually unobtainable on the second-hand market. The Historic Towns Trust has now made an agreement with Old House Books of Moretonhampstead in Devon to produce an affordable wall map of the 1520 map (approximately 2'6" x 3' 6") which will be in full colour and will include a booklet gazetteer of all the streets and places named on the map. The map will be available in September 2008 and will cost only £9.99. Old House Books publish other historical maps of London including The Great Fire of London map of 1666 and London Street Maps of 1863. For a full list of all the Old House Books historical maps, and information about how to order the medieval London map, visit their website: www.OldHouseBooks.co.uk

The Greville Estate: The History of a Kilburn Neighbourhood by Marianne Colloms and Dick Weindling, Camden History Society, 2007, £7.50, 112 pages, 8 maps, 29 illustrations, ISBN 978 0 904491 68 5

This well-researched and interesting book tells the story of a part of Kilburn that has not been examined in detail before. The opening chapters provide the reader with a general historical background. Situated near St John's Wood, North London, we learn of the first recorded settlement of 'Cuneburn' by Godwyn, a hermit, during the early 12th century, and the establishment of a small order of Benedictine nuns at Kilburn Priory. Subsequently, we are guided through the transformation of the small rural hamlet into a fashionable 18th-century resort, its further development as an exclusive residential retreat during the 19th century, and the re-development of much of Kilburn during the 20th and 21st centuries.

‘The Greville Estate’ refers to land purchased by the aristocrat and speculator Fulk Greville-Howard, who leased two plots to property developers in 1819. One of the developers, George Pocock, set out to create country villas for wealthy London businessmen and their families. The result was a thriving 19th-century community whose streets, houses and residents are the main focus of the authors’ research. In many cases the authors have been successful in determining the identities of a succession of occupants of a particular property.

Victorian Kilburn attracted scores of artists, writers, actors and musicians, as well as businessmen, solicitors, clerks and shop workers. Illustrious residents included George Orwell, artist Sir Francis Dicksee, Punch cartoonist Lewis Baumer, John Spedan Lewis (founder of the John Lewis Partnership), music hall star Belle Bilton, H. G. Wells and A. A. Milne.

The book charts the rise and fall of a Victorian neighbourhood in what is perhaps a familiar tale. By the beginning of the 20th century, a number of streets in the poorest part of Kilburn were in a sorry state. At the same time, some of grander properties were becoming too costly to run as single homes, and many were subdivided into flats. The area also suffered significant bomb damage during the Second World War. During the postwar period, the rising need for social housing meant that many buildings were bought by property developers only to be demolished and turned into blocks of flats, thus changing the character of the area forever.

The Greville Estate is well illustrated with a number of clearly reproduced maps, advertisements and historical photographs of Kilburn and of persons known to have lived here. It would certainly be of interest to anyone who is looking to discover more about Kilburn’s past, and in particular the intriguing characters who have shaped its history.

GALLERIES AND EXHIBITIONS

The Women's Library Exhibition

What Women Want

1 May to 13 September 2008

What have women fought for, longed for and achieved? How much have their aspirations changed? Historic photographs, documents, posters and ephemera from

The Women's Library collections bring to life the struggle for political representation and equality at work, and reveal unexpected insights into the worlds of leisure, beauty and home. An impressive display of original suffrage parade banners marks the 100th anniversary of the 1908 suffrage marches. For more information call 020 7320 2222 or visit www.thewomenslibrary.ac.uk.

BDA Dental Museum
A Bite of the Past
21 February to 16 May 2008

This small exhibition provides a rare opportunity to see material from the Centre for Human Bioarchaeology at the Museum of London. The BDA Dental Museum tells the fascinating story of how people have (or haven't!) looked after their teeth in the past. From 19th-century dental floss to toothache cures, clockwork drills to toothpaste adverts, there is more to discover than you might imagine. The Museum is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1pm to 4pm; other times by appointment. Admission free. Contact Melanie Parker, Museum Education Officer, BDA Dental Museum, British Dental Association, 64 Wimpole Street, London W1G 8YS. Tel. 0207 535 5860. Fax. 0207 935 6492. www.bda.org/museum

Camden Local Studies and Archives Centre
"Little Italy" Exhibition
2 June to 27 September 2008

This exhibition will tell the fascinating story of London's original "Little Italy", the Italian quarter in Holborn. It will cover the history of the community from its origins in the early 19th century, through its height in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, up to its decline after the Second World War. Venue: Camden Local Studies and Archives Centre, 2nd Floor, Holborn Library, 32-38 Theobalds Road, London. Opening hours: Monday 10.00am-7.00pm, Tuesday 10.00am-6.00pm, Thursday 10.00am-7.00pm, Friday 10.00am-6.00pm, Saturday 10.00am-1.00pm and 2.00pm-5.00pm. Admission free. For more information contact: Tudor Allen, Senior Archivist (020 7974 6342) tudor.allen@camden.gov.uk, Camden Local Studies and Archives Centre, Holborn Library, 32-38 Theobalds Road, London WC1X 8PA.

Jack the Ripper and the East End
Museum in Docklands
15 May – 2 November 2008

Museum in Docklands is returning to the scene of London's most infamous crimes in 'Jack the Ripper and the East End', the first exhibition to explore the Jack the Ripper murders and their enduring legacy. Step back in time to the labyrinth of late-Victorian Whitechapel, and uncover the human stories behind the sensational reports and explore the lives of the victims, witnesses, suspects and police, and the world they lived in. Tickets (including entry to the Museum in Docklands): £7 (£5 concs). Due to the sensitive nature of the exhibition, it is not recommended for children under 12.

The Big Smoke
Foyer Display, Museum of London
1 July - 21 September 2008

This small display looks at the history of smoking in the capital over the last 400 years, in the light of the recent ban on smoking in public places. It charts the changing attitudes towards smoking and looks at the effects of the ban on London today. Listen to the views of Londoners as they voice their opinions on the smokefree legislation and add your own to the display.
